RIBA'S LUBETKIN PRIZE

The British pavilion for the 2010 Shanghai World's Fair, designed by Heatherwick Studio, received the Royal Institute of British Architect's prestigious Lubetkin prize for a structure designed by one of its members for the international scene. The pavilion is nicknamed the "seed cathedral" and is composed of 60 000 long, acrylic stalks with steel tips. The stalks sway in the breeze, evoking a dandelion for some, or sea urchin for others. The jury was chaired by RIBA President Ruth Reed.

ARGENTINA

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF LATIN-AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE

This congress will take place in Rosario, Argentina on 6 to 8 October 2010, on the theme Habitat and Housing: reflections and projects. The event will unite architects from Latin America and the Iberian peninsula at this time when most countries in Central and South America are commemorating the 200th anniversary of their independence. In this context, the organisers want to focus on an emerging architecture that is more thoughtful, more responsible and more attentive to the realities of cities and culture. In this part of the world, over 40% of the population in most cities lives under poverty line. The aim is to re-concentrate attention on social insertion and the quality of life rather than blind compliance to the dictates of the world market.

COLOMBIA

BIAU 2010 IN MEDELLIN

The 7th edition of the Ibero-American architecture and planning biennial (BIAU) will take place in Medellin, Colombia on 11-15 October 2010. This event, initiated in 1998 by the Spanish Minister of Housing, has become a reference in the Ibero-American community of architects and planners. The theme of this session, Architecture that Integrates Citizens, will focus on urban experiments and dealing with marginal neighborhoods made up of a particular social community, be they in the city centre or on the outskirts of town. It will also identify new attitudes expressed by public and local authorities toward the most disadvantaged members of the population. The Colombian Society of Architects and the Superior Council of Associations of Spanish Architects are associated with this event. In parallel, the Pan-American Federation of Associations of Architects (FPAA) will hold its general assembly on 11-14 October 2010.
