THE UIA AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Architects are committed to coping with climate change—both by working to reduce wasteful emissions from building systems, and by ameliorating the effects of extreme weather.

By originating the “2050 Imperative” and attracting so many influential world signatories, UIA has laid out very aggressive—but achievable—goals for reducing the so-called carbon footprint of the building sector.

COP21, the global negotiations that may achieve a new world treaty to curb greenhouse gas emissions and intensify the aims of the Kyoto Protocol, will start in Paris on 30 November 2015.

The UIA—with the Architects’ Council of Europe, the French architecture bodies CNOA and CIAF, and the Cité de l’architecture et du patrimoine—is preparing to stage major events in Paris for COP21. These will underscore the importance of architecture and town planning in coming to terms with the realities and imperatives of global climate change.

CHARLES CORREA A TALENTED AND GENEROUS MENTOR

Indian architect Charles Correa passed away in Mumbai on 16 June 2015, at the age of 84. He received the most prestigious national and global architectural awards, including the UIA Gold Medal in 1990, following his selection in 1984 for the UIA Sir Robert Matthew Prize for his exemplary contribution in favour of the most disadvantaged communities.

From the early days of his career in Mumbai in 1958, he closely associated architecture and urban planning, dedicated to helping resolve the serious human problems caused by rapid urbanisation in developing countries in general, and Indian cities in particular. All of his realisations, regardless of scale, integrate energy, climate, and resources as determinant factors.

Charles Correa always endeavoured to stretch the limits of imagination through his acute observation of the ingenuity deployed by the poorest urban populations and in the traditional and industrious processes of self-built rural architecture.

His buildings don't celebrate wealth or power; they proclaim the virtues of an architecture devoted to common sense, a love for life, and respect for others.

The architectural community was deeply moved by his passing, and throughout the world expressed its sadness and its attachment to the work of one its most talented and generous members.

FRANÇOISE HÉLÈNE JOURDA A RESPONSIBLE CITIZEN-ARCHITECT

Françoise-Hélène Jourda passed away in Paris on 31 May 2015, at the age of 59.

An activist for green architecture in France, she very early advocated and practised a style of responsible architecture that closely resembles the Scandinavian and German models.

She won the competition to design the school of architecture in Lyon with Gilles Perraudin. This work earned its authors a special jury mention in the French Equerre d'Argent architecture prize.

Françoise-Hélène was among the most diligent architect in the fight for environmental respect in the building process. She maintained a strong presence with the National Council of the Ordre of French Architects during the important national dialogues regarding the environment: the 'Grenelle de l'environnement'.

She acquired international stature in her work, and was selected for one of the UIA's most prestigious awards, the Auguste Perret Prize for 2008. She contributed to the UIA through the international consultations on responsible architecture, a competition in Marrakech, and the Blue Awards international student competition.

SPANISH ARCHITECTURE AWARDS 2015

The jury for the 2015 Spanish Architecture Awards, chaired by Jordi Ludevid i Anglada, president of the Superior Council of Colleges of Architects in Spain (CSCAE), selected as this year's winner the project by Victor López Cotelo to rehabilitate the Grenada military hospital through conversion into a school of architecture. The jury appreciated "the appropriateness of the project's architectural strategy that respects the historical dimension and diversity of this vast edifice with a masterful sense of balance and stylistic restraint".

The jury also attributed two special mentions: to a housing complex in the historic centre of Pamplona restored by Carlos Pereda Iglesias and Oscar Pérez Silanes; and to the rehabilitation and expansion of Castillo de la Luz in Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Canary Islands, realised by Fuensanta Nieto and Enrique Sobejano.

CAA LAUNCHES AN INDEX OF SPECIALIST ARCHITECTS

The Commonwealth Association of Architects announces the publication of its new web platform: the CAA Specialist Architects Listing. The platform was launched by the CAA member organisations' presidents as part of the CAA Golden Jubilee general assembly held at the RIBA offices in London.

The CAA List is intended as a tool for networking among architects, clients, developers, and specialist-consultants. It will facilitate the organisation of joint ventures between architects and help clients find an appropriate architect for their projects.

All specialist architects who have been working in the Commonwealth and registered with their national institute or association for at least 10 years are eligible for listing.

INTERNATIONAL COMPETITION TO DESIGN MOLEWA TOWNSHIP - CHINA RESULTS

The jury meeting for the international competition launched by Hua Yan Cultural Investment Company to plan China's MOLEWA township took place on 6 & 7 May 2015, in the city of Ruichang. The competition brief laid out requirements for the design of a series of prestigious commercial and cultural facilities and residential units having a strong architectural identity. Its goal was to create a township called MOLEWA - the Mount Lu Estate of World Architecture.

Former UIA vice-president Mauricio Rivero Borrell chaired the jury. Ms. Marianne Burkhalter (Switzerland) and Mr. Chun Gyu Shin (Korea) represented the International Union of Architects for the commercial and cultural category, while Ms. Jennifer Lee (United States) represented UIA for the residential category.

Following deliberations and a careful study of all the projects, the jury made the following declaration: "by unanimous vote, the jury felt that though the presented works included important proposals and interesting options for architectural solutions, none could be considered for first prize". Based on this appreciation, the jury selected four proposals for second prizes, six more for third prizes, and awarded seven honourable mentions.
